Special Olympics Minnesota Seeks Leadership Volunteers for Enthusiastic Princeton Team

Help out Special Olympics Minnesota (SOMN) athletes in your community by becoming a leadership volunteer. Volunteers provide the sports skills and spirit that define a true athlete; they're role models and character builders. Key volunteers manage the Princeton Special Olympics delegation so that athletes can participate in premier competitions where they have the ability to grow and improve physically, mentally and socially.

Volunteer positions available include head of delegation, financial chair, fundraising chair, registration chair, equipment chair and head coaches. Most of these positions only take an hour or two per week seasonally but are vital for a smooth running program. Volunteers do not need any previous involvement with Special Olympics or any specific sports knowledge. SOMN also provides all of the necessary training so that the Princeton delegation will operate successfully. Linda Hines, a Special Olympics coach for the Duluth Allstars delegation said, "I have always received far more than I have ever given. The spirit of Special Olympics is in the eyes and hearts of the athletes and amazing volunteers." Please consider donating your time to a great organization. These are wonderful, engaging and rewarding volunteer opportunities that directly impact your community!

If you are interested in becoming a leadership volunteer with Special Olympics Minnesota Princeton team, please contact Ben Swarts at ben.swarts@somn.org or 612.604.1257.

About Special Olympics Minnesota

Special Olympics Minnesota provides year-round sports training and competition in 17-Olympic type sports for more than 8,000 children and adults with intellectual disabilities. Through Special Olympics' athletic health and leadership programs, people with intellectual disabilities transform themselves, their communities and the world.

FINANCIAL FOCUS: Help Mom with her Retirement Income Strategy

Article 8–May 4, 2015

Mother’s Day is almost here. This occasion may have special significance for you if you’ve been fortunate enough to have your mother around for your adult life. So naturally, you’ll want to bring Mom some flowers or another gift. But if she’s planning to retire soon, you may want to think about a longer-term way to improve her life — namely, by initiating a conversation about her retirement income strategy.

Of course, she may already have matters well in hand. But a great many people on the verge of retirement have not planned for those years, so you may be able to provide some valuable suggestions. Here are a few ideas:

Boost contributions to retirement plans. If Mom is still working, urge her to contribute as much as she can afford to her IRA and her employer-sponsored retirement plan, such as a 401(k). The chances are pretty good that she will be spending many years in retirement — in fact, the average life expectancy for a 65-year-old woman is 20.5 more years, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. So she’ll want to accumulate as much as possible before she bids “adieu” to the working world.

Discuss appropriate withdrawal rates. Encourage your mother to meet with a financial professional to determine an appropriate rate of withdrawal from her investments. To help ensure that she doesn’t outlive her resources, she needs to avoid taking out too much during her early years of retirement.

Take care of legal arrangements. If you haven’t already done so, ask your mother if she has drawn up the important legal documents related to her estate plans. Does she have a will? Has she created a durable power of attorney, which allows her to name someone to make financial and health care decisions on her behalf if she becomes incapacitated? As you know, this is a sensitive topic, so you’ll want to approach it with care.

Evaluate Social Security options. Your mother is probably well aware that she can start taking Social Security as early as age 62, but will get much bigger monthly payments if she waits until her full retirement age, which will likely be 66 or 67. But she may not know that she might be able to benefit from a Social Security “spousal strategy” that could result in her receiving more income than she could get by just taking her own benefits. For example, if her spouse is the higher wage earner and can afford to delay taking benefits, your mother could eventually receive higher survivor benefits. Or, your mother and her spouse could employ a “file and suspend” strategy. Under this strategy, her spouse, upon reaching full retirement age, files for retirement benefits and then immediately requests to have those benefits suspended. As a result, your mother can file for spousal benefits, which would be larger than what she would receive at her full retirement age. To make sure they are making any Social Security-related moves correctly, though, your mother and her spouse will want to consult with a tax advisor who is thoroughly familiar with Social Security rules.

You want your mother to enjoy a long, happy and active retirement. So, talk to her about the moves she can make to help turn that aspiration into reality.
